The other secondary comparison was between subjects with pure generalized social anxiety disorder group A and subjects with pure major depression group C. The interview consisted of the social phobia module of the Structured Clinical Interview for DSM-IV SCID 16 – modified to assess generalized social anxiety disorder—and the major depressive episode, mania, panic disorder, alcohol and drug abuse, and suicide modules of the Mini-International Neuropsychiatric Interview

Chi-square statistics were used for categorical variables. The principal investigator sent to a random sample of 7, eligible subjects a questionnaire and an invitation to participate in a study about the effect of illness on health-related quality of life.
